ABSTRACT

This list is intended to provide librarians with a resource for implementing or modifying their library instruction programs and for developing state/regional clearinghouses, directories, or newsletters on library instruction appropriate to local needs. A clearinghouse is here defined as a center which collects instructional materials for loan and/or on-site inspection. Newsletters and directories are included if they are devoted exclusively to library instruction. Information was collected from the United States, Canada, and selected other countries. Using a questionnaire devised to provide uniform information for all contacts, information was collected on the services, resources, availability, price, and contact persons for all clearinghouses, directories, and newsletters now existing or in the planning stage. The list is comprised first of a summary of the information obtained by type and location and is followed by more detailed information presented on the completed questionnaires. (Author/JVP)

INTRODUCTION

At the 1978 American Library Association midwinter meeting of the ACRL Bibliographic Instruction Section's Committee on Cooperation, chaired by Carolyn Dusenbury (University of Utah Library), the idea of compiling a list of clearinghouses, directories, and newsletters dealing with library instruction was initiated. The purpose of completing the list is to provide librarians with a resource for implementing or modifying their library instruction program and for developing a state/regional clearinghouse, newsletter, or directory on library instruction appropriate to localized needs. A clearinghouse was defined as a center which collects library instructional materials for loan and/or on-site inspection. Newsletters and directories were included in the list if they were devoted exclusively to library instruction.

The aim of the subgroup of the committee responsible for this task was to survey the existing or planned clearinghouses, directories, or newsletters found within the United States, Canada, and selected other countries. To accomplish this goal, the areas were divided among the three subgroup members, Linda Lester (Findlay College Library), William Prince (Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University Library), and James Ward (David Lipscomb College Library). In order to develop uniformity in the data gathering, the members of the subcommittee devised a questionnaire to be used with all contacts. Lists of contacts were obtained from the files of Carolyn Kirkendall at Project LOEX, from Tom Kirk's (Earlham College) Library Instruction Clearinghouses and Committees list, and from Exir Brennan's (University of Alabama) list which was developed for a chapter in the second edition of John Luban's forthcoming book, Educating the Library User.

Using the questionnaire, the information was collected through a telephone survey of the above listed contacts. Then sources generated from the original contacts were also surveyed. To verify the data collected, the completed questionnaires were mailed to each phone respondent for correction.

The resulting information consists of two parts. Part one contains the addresses and contact personnel for the clearinghouses, newsletters, and directories in operation and those in the implementation stage or under consideration as of this writing. Part two, which contains detailed information about the clearinghouses, consists of the completed questionnaires for the clearinghouses.

Great Britain-Library Instruction Materials Bank

The Library Instruction Materials Bank (LIMB) functions as part of the work of the British Library's Information Officer for User Education based at Loughborough University of Technology. There is no membership as such, since LIMB is accessible to any library or individual free. No materials are lent but if duplicate copies are held (they usually are) they are sent in response to inquiries. Otherwise simply information about materials and their producers is sent out. This is done in the form of a computer printout since LIMB is a machine-readable data base. INFUSE (the newsletter) is another part of the work of the Information Officer for User Educa on and as such is not really linked to LIMB. It is available on subscription which is £5.00 (U.K.) and £7.00 (overseas).

Australia-Reader Education Data Base

The data base is still not yet off the ground. The major delay in getting it going is the compilation of an adequate thesaurus.

Our aim is to base this thesaurus on the ERIC thesaurus and make additional indicators. It is planned to have a clearing-house in each of Australia's capital cities with processing being done at one point - Caulfield Institute of Technology. All college libraries (once it is going, University libraries will be able to join) will send 9 copies of all handouts they produce and a copy of any A-V item they produce (nine video copies will be made - this tape may include several different productions for the sake of economy). The items will be coded and sent to the other clearing-houses for filing.

It is expected that libraries wishing to develop a new format or produce a handout or A-V item will visit each clearing-house and access the thesaurus (hopefully COMFICHE) for the appropriate data. If COMFICHE is available, all contributing libraries will have their own copy and could approach the producing library direct, but we feel that with Australian-wide examples in the data base, it is best physically accessed first, then contact with the producing library for details, would make it more worthwhile.
